... need to have settlers of Agboglobshie relocated.

David Asante-Appetu on Wednesday after visiting and inspecting the area following deadly clashes involving Dagombas and Kokombas suggested that the settlers should be relocated.

This suggestion was greeted with stern resistance from the feuding groups.

On Thursday, April 13 when he visited the area, the NPP regional chairman rubbished the IGP's suggestion.

“But where will we relocate them to?” he asked.

He assured the settlers that there will be no relocation, making an appeal rather to the IGP to beef up security in the community.

“I am appealing to the IGP to get up and see to it that more police are in the [Agboglobshie] market.

He told journalists that the simmering tension within the area “should not be two policemen or three policemen”.

According to him, there are enough space for sophisticated gadgets of the police to be mounted as part of surveillance.

Notwithstanding, calm has been restored to the area since the clashes on Tuesday left three persons dead.

The IGP had visited the area together with the ministers of Defence, Interior and National Security.
